Common European Framework of Reference for Languages: learning, teaching, assessment (CEFR)

Online: Synopsis + Complete text of the CEFR developed through a process of scientific research and wide consultation, this document provides a practical tool for setting clear standards to be attained at successive stages of learning; it's also an ideal tool for evaluating results in an internationally comparable manner (also see the section "Manual for relating language examinations to the CEFR"). It is the result of a decade of research and ongoing work leading to the "threshold levels" to be achieved to communicate effectively in a foreign language.

The Common European Framework of Reference (CEFR) provides a basis for the mutual recognition of language qualifications, facilitating educational and occupational mobility. It is increasingly used in the reform of national curricula and by international consortia for the comparison of language certificates. Refer to the following sections for more information:

"Manual for relating language examinations to the CEFR"

"Illustrations of levels of language proficiency"

A European Union Council Resolution (November 2001) recommends the use of this Council of Europe instrument in setting up systems of validation of language competences.

The Framework is a tool that describes as completely as possible i) all the language skills, ii) all the knowledge used to develop them, iii) all the situations and domains that may require the use of a foreign language to communicate.

The CEFR is of particular interest to course designers, textbook writers, testers, teachers and teacher trainers - in fact to all who are directly involved in language teaching and testing.

It provides a clear definition of the objectives to be achieved when learning and teaching a language, and to choose the tools to achieve these results.

In recent years it has become a unique reference document that is available in nearly thirty languages.
